"One of the mysteries of life is the patience displayed by people in regard to inflation. If you proposed to anybody that he accept a ten percent cut in pay, he'd be outraged. Yet the same person accepts a ten percent deterioration in the value of his dollar, over a term of a few years, without wanting very much to stop the process." Industrial Press Service.

More car than this Impala Sport Coupe is hard to find at any price.

clings to curves like a cat on a carpet!

the travel-lovin' Chevrolet

Nothing else but a dyed-in-the-wool sports car like the Corvett can take a turn with such solid assurance!

It's easy to see where Chevrolet gets its road sense. With big coil springs at every wheel, a firm, wider stance and 40 of its pounds distributed with painstaking care, Chevy's born with it.

The only thing that may be hard to understand is how it can offer the ride it does, along with so many other luxury-car virtues, and still compete in the low-price field.

We use the word compete only in the sense of price. For with a ride as special as Chevy's, real competitors are hard to come by. There's a world of difference between Chevrolet's coil springs at all four wheels and the leaf springs that most other cars still use. Take a Chevy down a snakey back road and you'll feel the difference in the sure way it holds through curves and shoots over rough spots with hardly a ripple.

This one's really made to travel and loves every minute of it.

Stop by your local authorized Chevrolet dealer's and sample Chevy's road sense!

THE OUTLOOK FOR DEPARTMENT STORE STOCKS

Stimulated by the present boom in the economy which has exceeded most earlier predictions, department stores and mail order chains are enjoying record sales and earnings. Indications are that this robust recovery should continue and with a smaller income at an all time high, retail outlets look for record sales and Christmas sales. While most department and mail order stocks are at prices that discount to some extent these optimistic prospects, there still appear to be values in the industry for investors interested in modest growth and a reasonable return. At the present time Associated Dry Goods and Federated Department Stores appear attractive while Gimbel's has speculative appeal. The two major factors in the mail order field, Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward, can be bought for long term capital gains.

The department store industry since the war has undergone a radical change, most of it being forced on the stores by shifting population and new merchandising methods. On the whole the industry has survived these changes remarkably well and today is enjoying the fruits of aggressive merchandising and store expansion programs.

While the department stores today receive a smaller percentage of total retail sales (5% versus 8.2% in the mid 1940s) dollar sales and earnings especially during the past few years have steadily improved. The standard of living, population growth, and inflation, and while the percentage of total retail sales has declined since the mid 1940s, it has improved from its low point in the late 1940s and early 1950s.

Looking ahead it would appear that the industry should be able to at least maintain its present position and possibly obtain a greater portion of the consumer's retail dollar. Our reasons for viewing their future optimistically are based on several factors. The first is the public's acceptance of buying on credit which tends to give the department store an advantage over some of its competitors. While credit and charge plans are available in other retail outlets, they are not promoted to the extent that they are in a department store. Secondly, the rise in middle income families should aid department stores to a greater extent than other segments of the retail field as it is this portion of the population to which the department store caters. Shorter working hours and the variety of leisure time merchandise (fashion wear, sporting and outdoor equipment, luggage, etc.) is a further factor favorable to their long range prospects. Finally the arrival of the post war baby boom at an age where they will become a major source of retail sales gives a note of optimism to all traders.

While we have picked Associated Dry Goods and Federated as our choices in the industry and believe Gimbel's is speculatively promising, we still think Mercantile Stores offers value here while Allied can be held as a yield issue and one that is reaping its management. Penny is a quality issue which should be retained in investment accounts, but present prices are a little high for current purchases. May Department Stores and Marshall Field do not appear to be overly attractive at present levels nor does Macy.

MOTOR MAIDS

'Pro' Drivers
Made Not Born

By Martha Johnson
Dodge Safety Consultant

You, too, can be a professional driver.

In fact, it's important that you are as professional about driving as the trained truck, bus and taxi driver.

To acquire this technique the National Safety Council lists these driving "extras."

Obey traffic signals and never get caught moving in an intersection when the traffic light is yellow.

Look both ways before starting on the green light to make certain no cross traffic is coming through against the light.

Allow one vehicle length of following distance for every 10 miles per hour of speed.

So you won't crowd the center line, line up a point on the dash or hood of your car with the road edge to keep the wheels safely within one foot of the road edge.

Look to the rear before pulling into the left lane to pass a car to make certain no vehicle is trying to pass you.

Slow down for all pedestrians at all times, particularly between intersections.

Don't drive when drowsy and don't relax too much while driving, particularly on superhighways.

On long trips, don't try for speed and endurance records.

And finally, professional drivers are made—not born. Ability behind the wheel depends on knowing the facts about traffic regulations, accident prevention techniques and the human nature of traffic behavior. To keep "the professional touch," a driver never should stop learning.

The State Police remind us that driving too fast for conditions causes many highway deaths. Even though the driver may be unusually skillful, speed too fast for conditions is a handicap almost impossible to overcome, should an emergency arise. Slow Down and Live!
